

October 22, 2026

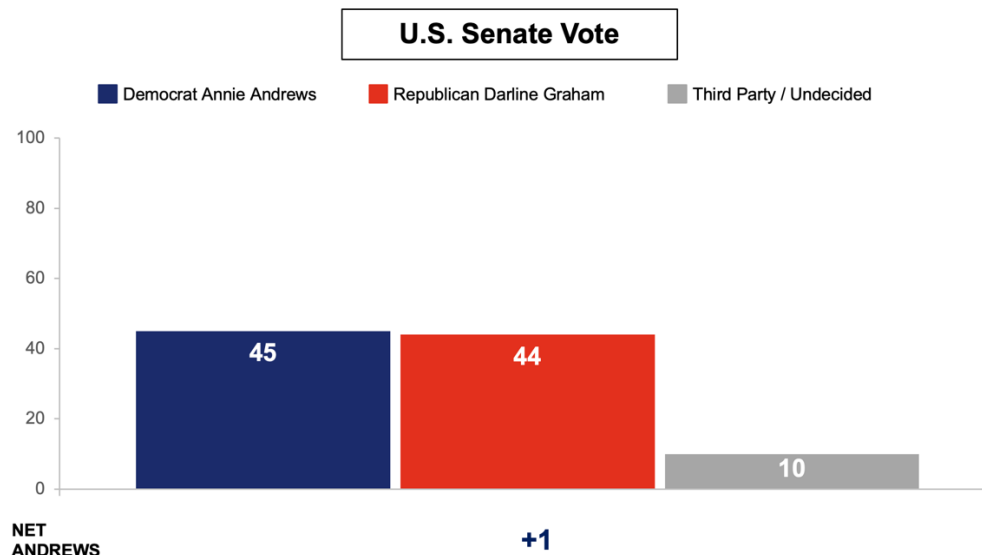

To: Interested Parties

From: Impact Research

Re: New Poll Finds Path to Victory for Annie Andrews

New polling in South Carolina shows that Annie Andrews has a narrow lead in the U.S. Senate race. In a state Trump carried by 18 points, Andrews is more popular than Senator Darline Graham and has an ability to peel off Republican voters.

- Annie Andrews leads in the race. Andrews' leads Graham on the full ballot (45% Andrews / 44% Graham / 3% Whitener / 2% Hackett / 5% undecided).

- Republicans remain unconsolidated behind Graham. Only 76% of Republicans back her, and Andrews wins 10% with the remainder undecided or breaking for the third party. Just two-thirds of Republicans (67%) say they are definitely voting for Graham. Meanwhile, Andrews is winning Independents by 38 points (61% Andrews / 23% Graham).
- Andrews is well-liked by voters who know her while Graham remains deeply unpopular. Andrews is now known by 85% of voters and has a double-digit popularity advantage (46% favorable / 39% unfavorable). Graham is underwater on favorability (40% favorable / 52% unfavorable) and on her job as Senator (35% positive / 46% negative).

Findings are based on a mixed phone and text-to-web survey conducted October 15-21, 2026, among n=800 likely 2026 general election voters in South Carolina. The margin of error for the full sample is +/- 3.5; the margin of error for subgroups varies and is higher.